Brett's story speaks to the positive impact that financial support can make to a young person whose life got off to a rocky start. Brett is now 30, with a good job at ArcelorMittal Dofasco as an Industrial Mechanic. He and his fiancée have bought a house, and are planning their wedding.

But just six years ago, Brett's future looked anything but rosy. Like many young people in foster care, Brett had found the transition to adulthood challenging, and was struggling to find purpose in his life and to make ends meet. He wanted to go to Mohawk College to further his education, but did not have the financial resources necessary to do so. As a former crown ward with our agency, he reached out to see if we could help him, and we did.

Brett is very grateful for this assistance, and happy to share his story, hoping it will encourage other young people in his situation to pursue their dreams. And we are so happy that we were able to help Brett at a time in his life when he wanted to make positive change.
